Dear Mr. Doe,

I heard about your company looking for web developers from a colleague of mine. As a long-time Discord user and an experienced developer, I would love to help Discord achieve their goal of giving people a platform to build communities on.

I've worked with different big tech companies all my career, and I would love to grab the opportunity of working with Discord in order to pay back for giving me a sense of belonging in my duration on the platform. In my latest job as a software developer at Microsoft, I helped push out the biggest updates for one of their products. I played a major role in writing Windows 30, Microsoft's latest product and success. I have loved writing programs since I was in high school, and I have loved writing software and apps that are useful to the general public. As a result, I mastered Web Development in different frameworks, and I am proficient in both the back and front-end of web development.

I look forward to the opportunity you have given me and your consideration and I look forward to hearing from you soon.

Yours truly,

Ahmad Badron
